Customer Reviews

This new graphic nonfiction series offers biographical treatments that highlight a technological breakthrough or innovation. Though produced by various illustrators, titles are visually similar: enticing covers, dynamic fonts, bold colors, and vibrant illustrations. Comic book-style word balloons feature fairly sophisticated vocabulary and occasional quotes or other primary source material. Each selection includes titled chapters, a table of contents, summary fact pages, further reading suggestions, and recommended Internet sites. There is close correlation between the dialogue and depicted actions and illustrations, which will provide visual reinforcement for struggling readers. These deceptively slim volumes convey a tremendous amount of information and vocabulary, and should attract attention from reluctant and enthusiastic readers alike. Bibliography. Glossary. Index. Recommended. --Library Media Connection; Vol. 25, No. 7; Pages 83-84, April 2007

I am a teacher and my students absolutely love these books! I would give them 5 stars, but they are cheaply made and pages start falling out after only a small amount of use.

My kids love graphic novels. In fact, when they are writing stories, they always ask if they can write comics (sometimes I say yes). (PS, I am a teacher and my kids are my students), but when they are able to learn about history in a media that excites them, I say "lets go for it" I really appreciate this series of books.

The artwork was dark and sinister looking, not at all appealing for a childrens book. Information was fairly accurate(I'm in the market for accurate farm books) but some negative statements were unnecessary and did not add to the information.

Fast shipping. Product was as described.
