This is book five of the Expectant Amish Widows Series. I really enjoyed this book though I must admit her life was very depressing. This book is well written, heart warming, and full of faith. I know you'll enjoy it too. Evelyn King is a widow left with a three year old and a baby due soon. Her marriage has been a great disappointment. All her family was happily married but there had been no love in her marriage. Her husband had failed to love her or her child. He had seemed to marry because he had to. They had a child because they were supposed to but he was never home. He spent all his time in his father's home caring for first his mother, then his father, and after his death he stayed to fix up the house. He cared for them but not for her. Their house was in total dis-repair and there was never any money. Now he had died and left her penniless. Hopefully his father's house was in better shape so she could rent it out and make enough money to feed them. Hezekiah Hostetler was a widower who lived close by. Although several years older the quiet man proposes but Evelyn doesn't love him. He could be the answer to her problems but could she enter another loveless marriage? Did she have a choice? A handsome new man comes to stay with her brother-in-law and offers to fix up her husband's father's house. This man makes her heart beat faster but he tells her he is engaged and that he doesn't stay put he moves around. How can she be drawn to him? Will he reject her and leave? This is a woman's journey back to the faith of her people. She must realize that God wasn't the one that destroyed her life but He was the only one that could put it back together. God has a plan for her and her little family and it is far greater than anything she had ever hoped for. God is like that. He can turn our lives around when we get out of His way and give Him control. He has a plan for all of us and it is good not evil. Trust in God!
