A Lack Of Motive: David Brunelle Legal Thriller #8 (David Brunelle Legal Thrillers)

Synopsis

Motive, means, opportunity. The solution to the classic whodunit. But what if the person "who done it" had no motive at all? Tech mogul Neil Rappaport had everything any person could want: fame, riches, a mansion on the shores of Lake Washington. So why would he murder some nameless drifter in a parking garage under the booming downtown of Seattle's most affluent suburb? His lawyers argue he wouldn't, and therefore he didn't. But the admittedly grainy surveillance video seems to say otherwise. Homicide D.A. encounters new friends, old flames, and a relentless defense attorney as he tries to hold a killer responsible. But how can he convince the jury that Rappaport committed the crime when he has to admit there's a complete LACK OF MOTIVE?

Customer Reviews

This is the best book in the series. There's a great plot, excellent characters, clear narration, and some moving human moments, such as when Brunelle visits the victim's family. The court room scenes are gripping and the conclusion is both surprising and inevitable. All in all, it couldn't be better. I can't wait for the next one.

I'm now on a second book by this author as I like courtroom drama's

If you like L.A Law, Matlock, Perry Mason, and Law and Order, these books are terrific. I like Dave as much as Mickey, the Lincoln Lawyer! Good reading.

My first Penner book - will read more.
