Customer Reviews

The first time I stayed in Paris I often had trouble communicating with sales staff in shops. Before going back, I studied this CD and booklet and then, during my second stay in Paris, I was able to communicate fairly successfully with the staff in shops. A large part of it was that I now knew what things the staff were likely to say and so, when they said something, I could recognize what they had said. Similarly, since I knew what sorts of responses they would expect from me, I could express myself in a way that wouldn't puzzle them. The CD also points out the things you need to say not to seem rude to the French (say "Bonjour", "Au revoir", etc.).
