With a love of nature and broad-ranging metaphysical beliefs, Maggie Oster has spent a lifetime studying and interpreting gardens and gardening. She has a bachelor of science degree from Purdue University and a master of science degree from Cornell University, both in horticulture. Her writing and photography have encompassed a wide range of topics, culminating in eighteen books, including Reflections of the Spirit: Japanese Gardens in America. She has contributed to books, written newspaper and magazine articles, appeared on television, and served as a regional editor for the website of the National Gardening Association. Many of her books and articles feature her own photography. Oster maintains the family farm, including extensive food and ornamental gardens, in Indiana. She also operates a bed-and-breakfast in a cottage on the farm.

The best calendar ever. Perfect for the kitchen. Beautiful photos and filled with wonderful ideas for both your garden and meals. This calendar offers recipes and helpful hints. Plus, you'll stay informed of moon phases, cosmic events and the holidays of all the world religions. There's something to celebrate every day with this calendar. A calendar worth reading.

Bought last years calendar and liked it so much I had to make sure I continued having this hang in my kitchen. Great photos with plenty of helpful anecdotes and a monthly recipe.

I love this photographer's (apparently putting her name down violates the review regulations) photographs- very unique and a great kitchen calendar!

This is my second year getting this calendar. I love the photographs of the herb gardens. They give me something to think about for laying out my own garden. I also appreciate that the days are easy to see and read.

I.LOVE.THIS.CALENDAR! Everything and more for an Herb lovin' gal! Adore it and will order it again next year! xxoo

Love it!

This was a gift but my friend told me it was wonderful.
