Customer Reviews

JIM TARANTINO is a confirmed serial griller and a five-string banjo player living in Philadelphia. He learned to cook in his teens by working in his uncle's restaurants. He has appeared several times at Philadelphia's Book and the Cook and has written numerous magazine and newspaper articles on marinades and grilling.

I originally bought this book way back when it was first published and I loved it. But the old paperback binding was falling apart, getting hard to keep pages from flying out while I was trying to read it. I bought this one as a replacement and I'm glad I did. GREAT recipes, clear instructions. The Asian style marinades alone are worth the price. If you are a home chef who wants to see what it's like to create flavors with real ingredients instead of just dumping on some bland, factory made bottled stuff full of chemicals you can't pronounce, this is your book.

I wanted to do a less processed diet of grilled/smoked meat and fruits/veges. This book spends the first 1/4 discussing how cures/brines/marinades, etc work and tips. Surprisingly fun read. Next to each recipe he lists the meat that is best for it, such as pork, vs chicken, beef or fish. I made BBQ pork marinade and smoked it and made homemade BBQ sauce, my husband loved both. He also tells you if the marinade freezes with the meat well, so I have a second pork with marinade in the freezer. (Pork from warehouse clubs are so large, but great bargains.) Recipes are easy with basic ingredients and timing. I just wish it told me if I should cure/brine the meat before hand or smoke/bake. So not for the true beginner.

Decent book for newbs to the grill. I bought this as a gift for a newbie fellow pitmaster to help get started.

I have to Ryan a recipe and then I will let you know

Look it up, than grill

most recipes are useless
